College of Engineering alumni are among the greatest legacies and resources the University of Kentucky can boast. Graduates of the college provide innovation and advancements in technology, government, medicine, law, and business. College of Engineering alums have enhanced the reputation of UK through their intelligence, skill, and invention.

The purpose of the UKEAA is to promote through membership and activities a greater appreciation of the work and goals of the college, to build financial support for its many programs, to advise and counsel as to the college’s future plans, to serve as a general liaison between the college and its graduates, to assist in the recruitment of students and to support the increased diversity of the student body.

Members of the UKEAA Board strive to continue this tradition by serving as leaders among their fellow College of Engineering alumni. The UKEAA Board is a working board that is committed to assisting the College of Engineering in a number of important areas. Board members positively impact alumni, parents, and students through strategic programming and events, while building and strengthening strong bonds of friendship and professional networking.

“The College of Engineering’s past is distinguished, its present is secure, and its future is unlimited.”

— Rob Parker, BSME 1995, former UKEAA Board President 2019-2021
